The Society of Computing and Technology in Anaesthesia (SCATA) is a long established society supported by the Royal College of Anaesthetists (RCoA) and Association of Anaesthetists of Great Britain and Ireland (AAGBI). The Society promotes the science, research and use of computing and technology in anaesthesia and critical care to its members and through its partners.

Next year's annual scientific meeting (ASM) is being held in the centre of Birmingham and provides a fantastic and easily accessible location for delegates from all over the country.

The ASM is increasingly well attended particularly by clinicians with interests in technology, safety and education. It therefore presents a wonderful opportunity for your company to enhance its profile amongst the delegates and community by providing ample time to promote your technology and services and enabling opportunity for networking.

If you are interested in sponsoring SCATA ASM 2016 please contact the organisers via the addresses above where further information will be provided.

We look forward to hearing from you!
